Introduction

his guide has been prepared as an aid for the many researchers who come to the Library of Congress's Local History and Genealogy Room to research family roots in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales. The Library's collection of local history and genealogical material for the British Isles and Ireland is so large that it ranks second only to the Library's holdings of materials relating to the United States. This should not be surprising, as British local history societies have pursued active publishing programs since the 1700s and have produced hundreds of parish registers and other local records; the Library of Congress holds many of these publications.

Researchers have a myriad of reasons for coming to the Library of Congress, such as: reading already published genealogies, learning more about how to do British Isles genealogical research, building on research begun elsewhere by using the Library's extensive holdings of scholarly British local history publications, checking facts and culling biographical information, seeking information about the origin of family names, identifying geographic areas where families lived, or researching clans and tartans. Confronting this wide range of information can be daunting to the beginner. This book was prepared to assist would-be users of the British Isles collections—beginners or experienced users alike—to access these materials.

While this guide has been prepared primarily as an aid to researching English, Irish, Scottish, and Welsh genealogy and local history at the Library of Congress, it will also be useful for those searching these subjects in other large libraries. However, it is not intended to be a comprehensive guide to British Isles resources and should be supplemented by P. William Filby's American & British Genealogy & Heraldry: A Selected List of Books (Z5311.F55 1983) and supplements.

Nobility and heraldry are other topics of frequent interest. However, because relatively few Americans can trace their British Isles or Irish ancestry to royalty and nobility, these topics were deemed to be beyond the scope of this guide. Similarly, heraldry, a worthy subject in its own right, is beyond the basic needs of most individuals who are beginning to examine their British ancestry.

The overall arrangement of this guide is by subject. Although the contents for each country vary somewhat, the following basic subjects will be found for each: Handbooks, providing assistance for beginning research; Pedigrees and Family Histories, highlighting published genealogies; Bibliographies, listing sources for further research; Local History, detailing a myriad of references to information about places; Biographical Information, citing personal and professional details about ancestors in all disciplines; Maps, Atlases, Gazetteers, showing the location and giving an account of the historical development of areas; Names, Geographical, defining the origin and history of places; Names, Personal, discussing the origins and locations of family names; and Periodicals, identifying major journals and magazines on the subject. Supplementing these are unique subject headings for individual countries, such as Clans and Tartans for Scotland. The contents are supplemented by the Author and Title Index.

While the book is divided into four distinctive sections highlighting specific resources available for researching English, Irish, Scottish, or Welsh genealogy, in practice the records and the published materials are not always so clearly segmented. The research material reflects the interwoven historical development of these cultures and countries. Reflecting these complex relationships, some citations may be duplicated in several parts of this book, while others, which only appear in one section, may be useful in all four subject areas.

Parish Registers

Parish registers are church records that document births, marriages, and deaths. They exist in three forms: published alone, published as part of a local history series, and unpublished. Registers published as independent monographs can be identified in a library's catalogs; consultation with a reference librarian may be helpful. Registers that are published as part of a local history society series may be identified through use of the three Mullins guides listed above. Locations of unpublished parish records may be identified in the works listed below.

Parish Registers on Microfilm

The Challen Parish Register Typescripts (microfilm 23963) include parishes in London, the Midlands, and the southern counties. At the Library of Congress, indexes and lists of additional parish records may be examined in the Microform Reading Room. The MicRR guide No. 50 (also microfiche 2282) indexes the Challen Typescripts and provides a list of additional parish registers available on microfilm in the room. Card catalogs in the Microform Reading Room list holdings for microfilm of British parish registers. The subject heading is "Parish registers."

Boyd's Marriage Index on Microfiche

Boyd's Marriage Index, begun by Percival Boyd in the 1920s and covering the period 1538 to 1837, was compiled from English parish registers, bishops' transcripts, and marriage licenses in sixteen counties. Since only about one third of the parishes are represented in this compilation it is incomplete, having less than sixteen percent of all English marriages for that period. The microfilm publication consists of three parts: Boyd's Marriage Index (microfiche 94/2144), arranged by county with records of brides and grooms; Boyd's Marriage Index, 1538-1837, Second Series (microfiche 94/2143), and Boyd's Marriage Index, 1538-1837, 3rd Series (microfiche 94/2147), both arranged by bride and groom. The second and third series are sometimes referred to as the miscellaneous series. These indexes are useful in determining the date and place of a marriage as well as the particular parish in which it occurred. They may also help in estimating the frequency of a surname in a particular geographical area, or to identify the place of origin of someone who married in England before emigrating to North America or elsewhere.

The microfiche at the Library of Congress was reproduced from a copy at the Family History Library in Salt Lake City which, in turn, was made from the original Boyd's Marriage Index at the Society of Genealogists in London. Several editions of A List of Parishes in Boyd's Marriage Index have been published by the Society, so it is well to consult the Library of Congress computer catalog to determine the most recent one. The Lists also provide some detailed and useful information about the Index.

The Victoria histories of the counties of England represent scholarly local history research. Begun around 1900 this project has published local history volumes for some 30 percent of the English counties. Among the subjects included are the Domesday Books, bibliographies, eminent persons, maps, topographical accounts of parishes and manors, parish histories (including religious houses), and descriptions of hospitals, industries, schools, and sports. For two counties, Northamptonshire and Hertfordshire, there are separate genealogy volumes.

Biographical Information on Microfilm

British Biographical Archive (microfiche 86/901) is a single-alphabet cumulation of 324 of the most important English-language biographical reference works published between 1601 and 1929. Included are some 240,000 persons of local, regional, national, and international importance from England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland. The accompanying guide is the British Biographical Index (CT773.B75 1990 MicRR).

The British Biographical Archive. Series 2 (microfiche 97/1) continues the numbering of the first series in a single-alphabet cumulation of 268 source works originally published between 1601 and 1978. Included are some 170,000 persons, mainly from the period 1870 to 1940.

British and Irish Biographies, 1840–1940 (microfiche 88/161) lists information from 273 biographical dictionaries published between 1840 and 1940. Included are general biographical collections, as well as specialist, professional, and regional biographical dictionaries. Part 1 indexes biographical information for more than 180,000 prominent and not-so-prominent British and Irish persons. Part 2 reproduces individual biographical dictionaries in their entirety. Additional information may be available in the MicRR guide 135 at the Library of Congress. The materials described above may be examined in the Microform Reading Room.

Historical Collections on Microfilm

The Foreign Copying Program was begun in 1905 to transcribe manuscripts relating to American history in the British Museum (now the British Library), the Bodleian Library in Oxford, and the Public Record Office (PRO). Many of these records are of interest to genealogists. For example, PRO records of individuals and families emigrating; original correspondence regarding America and the West Indies (Colonial Office 5); documents regarding American Loyalists (Audit Office 12 and 13); West New Jersey Society records, 1675–1921 (land records Treasury Solicitor 12); and army pensioners encouraged to emigrate to New South Wales and New Zealand from 1846 to 1851 (War Office 1). At the Library of Congress the guide, Public Record Office Genealogy, a Selection of Leaflets, and the compiler's Genealogical Research in England's Public Record Office: a Guide for North Americans (CS49.R45 1996) may be consulted in the Library of Congress Manuscript Division Reading Room.

While there is no complete list of the British manuscripts, those copied before 1944 are described by Grace Gardner Griffin in A Guide to Manuscripts Relating to American History in British Depositories (CD1048.U5 A35 1946). More recent acquisitions are listed in the 1976 imprint, Manuscripts on Microfilm: A Checklist of the Holdings in the Manuscript Division (Z6621.U572 1975). Visitors to the Library of Congress may consult these indexes in the Manuscript Reading Room. Most of the British manuscripts relating to American history on microfilm are available for use through interlibrary loan. Arrangements should be made through a local library.

The British Manuscripts Project (microfilm 041) includes manuscripts from the Cambridge University Library, the Public Record Office (including the Colonial Office), Lincoln Cathedral, Oxford University (Bodleian Library), the National Library of Wales, and several country house libraries (Longleat, Holkham Hall, Penshurst, Knole, Woburn Abbey, and Syon House). An index to the collection is Lester K. Born's British Manuscripts Project, A Checklist of the Microfilms Prepared in England and Wales for the American Council of Learned Societies, 1941–1945 (Z6620.G7 U5). Visitors to the Library of Congress may examine the index and the collection in the Microform Reading Room.

The National Inventory of Documentary Sources in the United Kingdom (Microfiche 85/235) is a list of published and unpublished finding aids for archive and manuscript collections in the United Kingdom. It does not provide copies of the records themselves. The scope of this project includes county record offices (Berkshire, Gloucester, Bristol, Essex), university and public libraries (Bodleian), and special and private repositories (Guildhall Library, National Library of Wales). Readers in the Library of Congress may consult guide no. 101 in the Microform Reading Room.

Records of the States of the United States of America ("Early State Records") on microfilm 1550, include local, county, and city records, as well as newspapers for British colonial America. Legislative, statutory law, constitutional, administrative, executive, and court records are indexed. A Guide to the Microfilm Collection of Early State Records (Z663.96.G8) is on reference in the Microform Reading Room.

Additional Geographical Resources

The Ordnance Survey Maps of Great Britain are county maps (six inches to the mile scale) which reflect the area in the mid to late nineteenth century, showing manor houses, castles, etc. Indexed by county, survey maps exist for England, Wales, and Scotland. There are also thousands of single-sheet maps of Great Britain, which may show estates, coats of arms, cities, and towns. Although there is no published list or catalog of these sheet maps, visitors to the Library of Congress Geography and Map Reading Room may request the help of a map librarian in locating the item desired.

Also available are historical indexes such as Cassell's Gazetteer of Great Britain and Ireland (DA625.C344 1899), A Topographical Dictionary of Great Britain and Ireland, 1833 (DA625.G675), and Gazetteer of the British Isles, 9th ed. (DA640.B23 1963). In addition, hundreds of historical atlases of Great Britain, the earliest being the Saxton Atlas from the 1570s, can be examined in the Geography and Map Reading Room. More recent publications are the Index of Place Names: Census 1961, England, Wales, 1965 (DA640.A25) and United Kingdom; Official Standard Names Approved by the United States Board on Geographic Names, 1950 (DA640.U5). Researchers in other libraries may consult a reference librarian for assistance.

Domesday Book

The Domesday Book is the record of William the Conqueror's survey of England in 1086. For the majority of English villages and towns, the Domesday Book, organized by county, is the starting point of their recorded history. This first English census, considered by some as the most remarkable administrative accomplishment of the Middle Ages, provides a record of English social organization in the Anglo-Norman period. As a genealogical tool, however, its usefulness is limited. The works listed below attempt to assist modern readers who want to consult the Book.
